

Dear colleagues in all medical professions!

How do we as teachers of Anthroposophic Medicine convey it in an appropriate way? This question has been the heart of our annual interprofessional course modules:

„Teach the Teacher in Teaching Anthroposophic Medicine“.

With patient-centered training at its core, which is methodologically and didactically oriented towards the stages of Imagination, Inspiration and Intuition, this training course was conducted in three modules from 2014 to 2017, each with around 60 participants from 20 countries and 12 therapeutic professions.

Building on this, but not requiring attendance of the previous modules, the current, second course is now focusing on “learners at the center of training”. What are the conditions for a suitable learning atmosphere? How do you compose a training that gives the learner lively content and social interaction? How do you encourage self-reliance and independent practice? Against the background of these questions, participants and speakers will form a common learning and teaching community, enabling us to follow a path of practice together. We shall look at the composition of training modules, practice cooperative learning by determining and presenting the subtle bodies of the human fourfold nature, further develop our methodology for nature observation, and discuss media in education. Questions of professional team-building and cooperation in diagnostics and therapy, artistic deepening, didactic techniques and consolidating the acquired knowledge permeate the entire module. In addition, we shall jointly organize a party as a social element of training!

The lectures and plenary sessions will be professionally translated simultaneously into German and English; whispered translations into other languages will have technical support.

Target group and prerequisites

All those who want to learn how to teach Anthroposophic Medicine better and better in basic and advanced training settings are cordially invited to attend this module or the module series! Prerequisites for participation are a successfully completed training in a health profession recognized by the Medical Section at the Goetheanum, professional experience in Anthroposophic Medicine, and appropriate teaching experience or the concrete intention to take up such teaching activity (also practically in clinic or private practice, or as a mentor).

The number of participants is limited to ensure the quality of training. Please register soon using the attached form.

Financing

The interprofessional module preparation team is not charging any fees for the course, which is cost-covering, self-supporting and financed without donations. Any surpluses will go to our new “Teach the Teacher” homepage, which was created parallel to the course and provides materials (German|English) for self-study. A reduction of the participation fee can be granted in justified cases on request.
